MEMORANDUM

Pending before the Court¹ is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by federal prisoner Joshua Jay Berkey pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241. (ECF No. 5). He is challenging the sentence imposed upon him by the United States District Court for Northern District of West Virginia and asks this Court to vacate it. For the reasons set forth below, the petition is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

A. Relevant Background

On November 14, 2007, an Indictment filed in the United States District Court for the Northern District of West Virginia (the "trial court") charged Berkey with violating 18 U.S.C. § 2 and 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1), aiding and abetting the distribution of crack cocaine. He was also charged with being a felon in possession of a firearm in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(1) and 924(a)(2). On April 4, 2008, Berkey signed a plea agreement in which he agreed to plead guilty to Court One (aiding and abetting the distribution of crack cocaine) and Count Three (felon in possession).

On August 5, 2008, the trial court imposed its sentence. It found Berkey qualified as a career offender pursuant to U.S.S.G. § 4B1.1 and, as a result, the base offense level increased to level 34. The trial court imposed a sentence of 188 months of incarceration on Count One and 120 months of incarceration on Count Three, to be served concurrently.

In 2013, Berkey filed with the trial court a motion to vacate his sentence under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, which was subsequently dismissed because it was filed outside the applicable statute of limitations. Before Berkey can file another § 2255 motion, he must receive authorization from the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. This is in accordance with the 1996 amendments that the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA") made to § 2255, which bar a federal prisoner from filing a second or successive § 2255 motion unless the appropriate court of appeals first certifies the filing contains a claim based on either:

(1) newly discovered evidence that, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would have found the movant guilty of the offense; or

(2) a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable.

28 U.S.C. § 2255(h). See also 28 U.S.C. § 2244(a).

In 2015, in Johnson v. United States, 135 S.Ct. 2551 (2015), the Supreme Court held that the residual clause of the Armed Career Criminal Act ("ACCA") is unconstitutionally vague. In 2016, Berkey received authorization from the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to file a second or successive § 2255 motion and raise a claim under Johnson, which he subsequently filed with his trial court. Resp's Ex. 9. The trial court stayed the case pending the United States Supreme Court's decision in Beckles v. United States, 137 S.Ct. 886 (2017), which was decided on March 6, 2017, and which held that the residual clause in the advisory Sentencing Guidelines could not be subject to a void-for-vagueness challenge pursuant to Johnson.

On March 9, 2017, following the issuance of the Beckles decision, the trial court lifted the stay of the case before it and dismissed Berkey's § 2255 motion with prejudice. Resp's Ex. 10. In June 2017, Berkey, who at the time was incarcerated at FCI McKean,² which is located within the territorial boundaries of this Court, filed the instant petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241 (ECF No. 5), in which he challenges his career offender sentence. (See also Memorandum of Law, ECF Nos. 6, 8). Respondent subsequently filed his answer (ECF No. 14) in which he contends, inter alia, that this Court must dismiss the petition for lack of jurisdiction. Berkey did not file a reply.

B. Discussion

"The 'core' habeas corpus action is a prisoner challenging the authority of the entity detaining him to do so, usually on the ground that his predicate sentence or conviction is improper or invalid." McGee v. Martinez, 627 F.3d 933, 935 (3d Cir. 2010). As the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit explained in Bruce v. Warden Lewisburg USP, 868 F.3d 170 (3d Cir. 2017), prior to § 2255's enactment, federal prisoners seeking habeas relief could only do so by filing a petition under § 2241 in the federal district court in the district the prisoner was incarcerated.³ Id. at 178. "An increase in the number of federal habeas petitions produced serious administrative problems and overburdened

³ Section 2241 petitions must be filed in the federal district court in the district the prisoner is incarcerated because:

[t]he prisoner must direct his [§ 2241] petition to "the person who has custody over him." § 2242; see also Wales v. Whitney, 114 U.S. 564, 574, 5 S.Ct. 1050, 29 L.Ed. 277 (1885); Braden v. 30th Judicial Circuit Court of Ky., 410 U.S. 484, 494-95, 93 S.Ct. 1123, 35 L.Ed.2d 443 (1973). Longstanding practice under this immediate custodian rule 'confirms that in habeas challenges to present physical confinement...the default rule is that the proper respondent is the warden of the facility where the prisoner is being held.' Rumsfeld v. Padilla, 542 U.S. 426, 435, 124 S.Ct. 2711, 159 L.Ed.2d 513 (2004). And under the statute's jurisdiction of confinement rule, district courts may only grant habeas relief against custodians "within their respective jurisdictions." § 2241(a); see also Braden, 410 U.S. at 495, 93 S.Ct. 1123 ("[T]he language of § 2241(a) requires nothing more than that the court issuing the writ have jurisdiction over the custodian.").

the few district courts in the jurisdictions with major federal prisons." Id. (citing United States v. Hayman, 342 U.S. 205, 210-19 (1952)). To alleviate that burden, Congress in 1948 enacted § 2255:

A new remedial mechanism, § 2255 "replaced traditional habeas corpus for federal prisoners (at least in the first instance) with a process that allowed the prisoner to file a motion with the sentencing court on the ground that his sentence was, inter alia, imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States." Boumediene v. Bush, 553 U.S. 723, 774, 128 S.Ct. 2229, 171 L.Ed.2d 41 (2008) (internal quotation marks omitted). The statute's "sole purpose was to minimize the difficulties encountered in habeas corpus hearings by affording the same rights in another and more convenient forum." Hayman, 342 U.S. at 219, 72 S.Ct. 263; see also Hill v. United States, 368 U.S. 424, 427, 428 n.5, 82 S.Ct. 468, 7 L.Ed.2d 417 (1962) (describing the § 2255 remedy as "exactly commensurate" with § 2241's writ of habeas corpus); United States v. Anselmi, 207 F.2d 312, 314 (3d Cir. 1953).

So it is that a federal prisoner's first (and most often only) route for collateral review of his conviction or sentence is under § 2255.

Id.

The Third Circuit Court of Appeals has explained that now "[m]otions pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 are the presumptive means by which federal prisoners challenge their convictions or sentences that are allegedly in violation of the Constitution." Okereke v. United States, 307 F.3d 117, 120 (3d Cir. 2002). In contrast, as a general rule, a habeas petition under § 2241 is properly brought where the federal prisoner is seeking to challenge the carrying out or the execution of his sentence (such as, for example, a challenge to the Bureau of Prisons' computation of the federal sentence or a challenge to a disciplinary action that resulted in the loss of good-time credits). See, e.g., Barden v. Keohane, 921 F.2d 476, 478-79 (3d Cir. 1990); Queen v. Miner, 530 F.3d 253, 254 n.2 (3d Cir. 2008).

Importantly, § 2255 expressly prohibits a court from entertaining a § 2241 petition filed by a federal prisoner who is raising the types of claims that must be raised in a § 2255 motion unless it "appears that the remedy by [§ 2255 motion] is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention." 28 U.S.C. § 2255(e). This provision of § 2255 is commonly referred to as the "savings clause." See, e.g., Bruce, 868 F.3d at 174, 178-79.

In its landmark decision In re Dorsainvil, 119 F.3d 245 (3d Cir. 1997), the Third Circuit Court of Appeals recognized the one circumstance under which it has found § 2255's remedy to be inadequate or ineffective since AEDPA amended § 2255 in 1996 to include a one-year statute of limitations and the prohibition against the filing of second or successive motions. The petitioner in Dorsainvil, Ocsulis Dorsainvil, was convicted, inter alia, of using a gun in connection with a drug crime under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1). He was so convicted notwithstanding that he did not "use" the gun but the gun was merely present in the car from which the drugs were to be bought. After he had exhausted his appeals and litigated his first § 2255 motion, the Supreme Court in Bailey v. United States, 516 U.S. 137 (1995) construed the criminal statute under which Dorsainvil was convicted (18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1)) to exclude from the ambit of the statute mere presence of a gun at a drug crime, thus arguably rendering him actually innocent of the crime of using a gun in connection with a drug offense.

After the Supreme Court issued Bailey, Dorsainvil applied to the court of appeals for authorization to file in the district court a second or successive § 2255 motion. The court had no choice but to deny his request because he could not satisfy AEDPA's gatekeeping requirements for the filing of a second or successive § 2255 motion. That was because the decision in Bailey was one of statutory construction and, therefore, did not constitute "a new rule of constitutional law...that was previously unavailable[.]"⁴ Dorsainvil, 119 F.3d at 247-48 (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (now at § 2255(h))). Under these circumstances, the court of appeals determined that Dorsainvil had established that § 2255 was "inadequate or ineffective" to test the legality of his detention and, as a result, he could bring his claim in a § 2241 habeas corpus petition:

A similar case "involv[ing] the availability of collateral relief from a federal criminal conviction based upon an intervening change in substantive law" came before the Supreme Court in Davis v. United States, 417 U.S. 333, 334 (1974). In that case, the Court stated that a Supreme Court decision interpreting a criminal statute that resulted in the imprisonment of one whose conduct was not prohibited by law "presents exceptional circumstances where the need for the remedy afforded by the writ of habeas corpus is apparent." Id. at 346 (internal quotations omitted). The Court held that "if [petitioner's] contention is well taken, then [his] conviction and punishment are for an act that the law does not make criminal. There can be no room for doubt that such a circumstance inherently results in a complete miscarriage of justice and present(s) exceptional circumstances that justify collateral relief under § 2255." Id. at 346-47 (internal quotations omitted); see also United States v. Addonizio, 442 U.S. 178, 186-87, (1979) (discussing Davis and observing that a refusal to have vacated his sentence "would surely have been a 'complete miscarriage of justice,' since the conviction and sentence were no longer lawful").

The decision in Davis that § 2255 was broad enough to cover a defendant imprisoned for a crime that an intervening decision negates does not govern Dorsainvil's motion before us only because he has brought his claim for relief on a second § 2255 motion [subject to the gatekeeping provisions of AEDPA]. In the earlier part of this opinion, we construed the AEDPA to preclude our certification of a second § 2255 motion that relied on the intervening decision in Bailey as a basis for certification. Thus, Dorsainvil does not have and, because of the circumstance that he was convicted for a violation of § 924(c)(1) before the Bailey decision, never had an opportunity to challenge his conviction as inconsistent with the Supreme Court's interpretation of § 924(c)(1). If, as the Supreme Court stated in Davis, it is a "complete miscarriage of justice" to punish a defendant for an act that the law does not make criminal, thereby warranting resort to the collateral remedy afforded by § 2255, it must follow that it is the same "complete miscarriage of justice" when the AEDPA amendment to § 2255 makes that collateral remedy unavailable. In that unusual circumstance, the remedy afforded by § 2255 is "inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of [Dorsainvil's] detention."

There is no reason why § 2241 would not be available under these circumstances, provided of course that Dorsainvil could make the showing necessary to invoke habeas relief, an issue for the district court.

Id. at 250-51 (emphasis added).

In its recent decision in Bruce, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals set forth the two conditions that a federal prisoner confined within the Third Circuit must satisfy post-Dorsainvil in order to have his case fall within § 2255's savings clause. "First, a prisoner must assert a 'claim of 'actual innocence' on the theory that 'he is being detained for conduct that has subsequently been rendered non-criminal by an intervening Supreme Court decision' and our own precedent construing an intervening Supreme Court decision'—in other words, when there is a change in statutory caselaw that applies retroactively in cases on collateral review." Bruce, 868 F.3d at 180 (emphasis added) (quoting United States v. Tyler, 732 F.3d 241, 246 (3d Cir. 2013), which quoted Dorsainvil, 119 F.3d at 252). "[S]econd, the prisoner must be 'otherwise barred from challenging the legality of the conviction under § 2255.'" Id. (quoting Tyler, 732 F.3d at 246). "Stated differently, the prisoner has 'had no earlier opportunity to challenge his conviction for a crime that an intervening change in substantive law may negate.'" Id. (quoting Dorsainvil, 119 F.3d at 251) (emphasis added).

Berkey cannot satisfy these conditions. He argues that in accordance with Mathis v. United States, 136 S.Ct. 2243 (2016), his Pennsylvania robbery does not qualify as crimes of violence for the career offender enhancement. Unlike the petitioners in Bruce and in Dorsainvil, however, Berkey is not asserting that he is being detained for conduct that has subsequently been rendered non-criminal by intervening precedential caselaw interpreting the statute under which he was convicted.

Moreover, that Berkey has not or cannot receive authorization to file a successive § 2255 motion is not, in and of itself, a sufficient ground to render § 2255 "inadequate or ineffective." See also Dorsainvil, 119 F.3d at 251 ("We do not suggest that § 2255 would be 'inadequate or ineffective' so as to enable a second petitioner to invoke § 2241 merely because that petitioner is unable to meet the stringent gatekeeping requirements of [AEDPA's amendments to] § 2255. Such a holding would effectively eviscerate Congress's intent in amending § 2255."); Cradle v. United States ex rel. Miner, 290 F.3d 536, 539 (3d Cir. 2002) (per curiam) ("Section 2255 is not inadequate or ineffective merely because the sentencing court does not grant relief, the one-year statute of limitations has expired, or the petitioner is unable to meet the stringent gatekeeping requirements of the amended § 2255."); Gardner v. Warden Lewisburg USP, 845 F.3d 99, 103 (3d Cir. 2017) ("Adopting [the petitioner's] approach—under which all sentencing issues based on new Supreme Court decisions could be raised via § 2241 petitions—would [short-circuit § 2255's gatekeeping requirements]. The exception would swallow the rule that habeas claims presumptively must be brought in § 2255 motions.")

Additionally, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals has declined to extend § 2255's savings clause to circumstances in which the petitioner is challenging his sentence, as opposed to his conviction. Gardner, 845 F.3d at 103 (petitioner could not challenge his sentence based upon Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99 (2013) in a § 2241 habeas petition and rejecting the petitioner's argument that "if Congress had intended to limit § 2255's savings clause only to 'actual innocence' claims, the legislature would have drafted the statute differently."); Okereke, 307 F.3d at 120-21 (Dorsainvil's interpretation of § 2255 provides only a narrow exception to its presumptive exclusivity, and holding that the petitioner could not challenge his sentence under Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000) in a § 2241 habeas petition); Murray v. Warden Fairton FCI, 710 F. App'x 518, 520 (3d Cir. 2018) ("We conclude that the District Court properly rejected to petition as it related to [the petitioner's] 'Mathis' claim, too. We have not held that innocence-of-sentence claims fall within the exception to the rule that habeas claims must be brought in § 2255 motions."), cert. denied sub nom. 138 S.Ct. 2007 (2018).⁵

⁵ The courts of appeals are split on the application of the savings clause, see Bruce, 868 F.3d at 179-82, including whether in some limited circumstances it should apply to sentencing claims. Recently, in United States v. Wheeler, 886 F.3d 415 (4th Cir. 2018), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit held that "2255(e) must provide an avenue for prisoners to test the legality of their sentences pursuant to § 2241," id. at 428, and it set forth four factors that must be met in order for a court within its circuit to find that § 2255 is inadequate and ineffective to test the legality of a sentence. Id. at 429. The Solicitor General, on behalf of the United States, filed a petition for a writ of certiorari, which is pending before the Supreme Court of the United States.

C. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the petition for a writ of habeas corpus is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.⁶ An appropriate Order follows.
